Freddy Welsh, the champion, gave the fight to the Jersey City scrapper.
After the bout the spectators themselves were for both lads—the Western selves were for both lads—the Western was again don those green stockings. After the bout the spectators themselves were for both lads—the Western reontingent at the bout claiming that White had won, while the Eastern mentated that there was nothing to it but Shugrue.

As to the fight itself neither ladshowed any marks of punishment. Shugrue led in the early rounds and forced the Westerner to back ground, but the Jersey City lad lacked the punch. In the closing rounds White came back strong and forced the milling, but the advantage that the Eastern fighter piled up in the early rounds more than officet the advantage the Westerner gained with her falling in love with the living representative of her fancy.

Nothing more perfect in pure comedy could be imagined. The climax of the fun is reached in the scene where Col. Smith, under the pseudonym of Col. Vavasour, pres nts himself before Celia to tious deceased. Mis: Anglin and Stanley Dark who was admirable in the character of Col. J. N. Smith, kept the audience in roars of laughter. Orders for Prohibited Article. That the alleged dum-dum bullets which it was charged by the German American manufacturers were making for the allies will not fit any rifle in use by the forces of England and France is understood to be the discovery resulting from consideration and investigation of the charges. Sample bullets were submitted by the Ambas-sador. American manufacturers denied that they were making dum-dum or other bullets for any of the belligerents. Charges of mutilation of Belgians by German soldiers are likewise discountenanced by an American official just returned from Europe, who in extensive trips through the war theaters found no evidences of such atrocities being comces of such atrocities being committed by any persons.

London. Dec. 30.—"Pessimiam is growing in Germany." says a news agency dispatch received here from Copenhagen this afternoon. "It is evident the people are disappointed with the army's progress."

The dispatch then quotes Konrad Hauseman, a member of the German Hauseman, a member of the German Hauseman, a member of the German Charmes A. Clore, 21. of Dimarant, Va., and Ads.

The dispatch then quotes Konrad Hauseman, a member of the German Reichstag, as saying in the Berlin Tageblatt:

"Everywhere the people in public are endeavoring to keep cool and are simulating optimism, but in private they invariably express surprise that favorable results are not coming sooner. Sympathizers of the military party criticise the diplomats for not having secured for Germany more allies before the war. Outside of the Reichstag there is a strong current against the imperial chancellor, who is accused of every conceivable mistake."
